NOTICE OF MOTION AND EMERGENCY MOTION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

TO DEFENDANTS AND THEIR COUNSEL OF RECORD:

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE THAT on December 14, 2020, or as soon thereafter as this matter may be heard, in Courtroom 1 of the above-entitled Court, located at 3470 Twelfth Street, Riverside, CA 92501, or remotely via teleconference or videoconference, before the Honorable Jesus Bernal, Plaintiffs Immigrant Defenders Law Center, et al. will, and hereby do, move the Court to grant a class-wide preliminary injunction:

(1) Enjoining the Migrant Protection Protocols' Return Policy until hearings safely resume; (2) Allowing each of the Individual Plaintiffs and class members to return to the United States, with appropriate precautionary public health measures, to pursue their asylum claims; and (3) Requiring Defendants to provide meaningful access to legal services for all members of the class.

Individual Plaintiffs and others similarly situated are trapped in dangerous zones and transit corridors in Mexico, where they have endured physical attacks and threats, have been denied their basic human needs, and have been deprived of access to legal assistance. Due to the urgency of the issues raised in the accompanying Memorandum and Points of Authorities, Plaintiffs, on behalf of themselves and all those similarly situated, respectfully request this Court to schedule a hearing on December 14, 2020. This schedule was agreed to by the parties after meeting and conferring. It accommodates the urgency of emergency relief while allowing Defendants sufficient time to file opposition briefing.

This motion is based on this Notice of Motion and Motion, accompanying Memorandum of Points and Authorities, the supporting declarations and reports, all

Plaintiffs respectfully move this Court for an order (1) enjoining the Return Policy under the Migrant Protection Protocols ("the Protocols" or "MPP") until hearings safely resume and Individual Plaintiffs have meaningful access to legal services; (2) allowing Individual Plaintiffs to return to the United States, with appropriate precautionary public health measures, to pursue their asylum claims; and (3) requiring Defendants to provide meaningful access to legal services for all Individual Plaintiffs.¹

INTRODUCTION

Since January 2019, the government has trapped over 60,000 individuals seeking asylum, including the Individual Plaintiffs in this case, in life-threatening conditions in Mexico under the Protocols. These individuals suffered harm in their home countries, survived harrowing journeys, and sought protection in the United States, only to be sent back to dangerous conditions in Mexico to await immigration court hearings that may never happen. On October 28, 2020, Individual Plaintiffs, on behalf of themselves and a class of similarly situated individuals, along with two Organizational Plaintiffs, sued on nine claims. They move for a preliminary injunction on four of these claims.

First, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants' decision to implement the Return Policy after their adoption of the Hearing Suspension Directive is not in accordance with law or is in excess of Defendants' statutory authority because Individual Plaintiffs' proceedings are no longer "pending," but rather indefinitely suspended. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(C). Plaintiffs allege further that this decision was arbitrary and capricious because Defendants failed to consider Individual Plaintiffs' inability to meaningfully access legal representation for the purpose of applying for asylum, or the consequences of requiring asylum seekers to languish indefinitely in life-threatening conditions in Mexico.

Second, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants' Return Policy subverts and violates Individual Plaintiffs' right to apply for asylum by trapping them in a foreign country under dangerous conditions that obstruct access to all the components of the U.S. asylum system, by treating them in an arbitrary and non-uniform way, and by interfering with the Organizational Plaintiffs' ability to deliver meaningful legal assistance to class members. See 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1). Third, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants' Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy are arbitrary and capricious or an abuse of discretion because, in adopting these policies, Defendants failed to consider the obstacles that Individual Plaintiffs would face in accessing food, shelter, health care, and other basic needs; and the effect those obstacles would have in exacerbating such individuals' inability to meaningfully access legal representation. Plaintiffs allege that these policies are not in accordance with law because they impose systemic obstacles to Individual Plaintiffs' ability to access legal representation, the cumulative effect of which is tantamount to a denial of counsel. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1158, 1229a(b)(4)(A), 1362.

Finally, Plaintiffs allege that Defendants' Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy are arbitrary and capricious because, in adopting these policies, Defendants failed to consider the obstacles that Organizational Plaintiffs would face in safely meeting and meaningfully communicating with clients and potential clients who are placed into MPP. Plaintiffs allege that these policies are not in accordance with law or are in excess of Defendants' statutory authority because they interfere with Organizational Plaintiffs' ability to deliver meaningful pro bono legal assistance to Individual Plaintiffs.

Defendants have irreparably harmed Individual Plaintiffs by denying their right to apply for asylum, forcing them to remain in Mexico indefinitely under dangerous conditions, depriving them of access to basic needs, obstructing their access to legal representation, and preventing Organizational Plaintiffs from providing meaningful pro bono legal assistance to them. Plaintiffs seek to prevent the irreparable harm

Individual Plaintiffs are suffering and will continue to suffer unless the Defendants' actions are enjoined.

STATUTORY AND FACTUAL BACKGROUND

I. The U.S. Asylum System

The Refugee Act of 1980 ("the Refugee Act") broadly affords the right to apply for asylum to any noncitizen "physically present in the United States or who arrives in the United States . . . irrespective of such alien's status." 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1).² Individuals generally are eligible for a discretionary grant of asylum if they have experienced past persecution or have a well-founded fear of future persecution on account of race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, or political opinion, and if they are unable or unwilling to return to and avail themselves of the protection of their country of origin because of that persecution or fear. 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(42)(A). Although a grant of asylum may be discretionary, the right to apply for asylum is not.³

Because of the high stakes, the right to apply for asylum is robust. The right necessarily includes the right to counsel, at no expense to the government, see 8 U.S.C. § 1158(d)(4), the right to notice of the right to counsel, see id., and the right to access information in support of an application, see § 1158(b)(1)(B) (placing the burden on the applicant to present evidence to establish eligibility). The right also includes the right to uniform treatment by the U.S. government. Thus, under the Refugee Act, the Attorney General must "establish a uniform procedure for passing upon an asylum application." S. Rep. No. 256 (96th Cong. 1980), reprinted in 1980 U.S.C.C.A.N.

The INA further provides that noncitizens who are not eligible for asylum are protected from return to a country where it is more likely than not that their "life or freedom would be threatened ... because of [their] race, religion, nationality, membership in a particular social group, or political opinion." 8 U.S.C. § 1231(b)(3)(A). Noncitizens likewise may not be returned to a country where they are more likely than not to be tortured. 8 C.F.R. §§ 1208.16–1208.18.

141, 149. In that respect, the Refugee Act eliminated the geographical and ideological preferences that previously had dominated the U.S. asylum system.⁴

II. The Migrant Protection Protocols

On December 20, 2018, former Department of Homeland Security ("DHS") Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen announced that DHS would implement the Migrant Protection Protocols. The Protocols serve the Administration's broader goal of deterring individuals from seeking asylum in the United States. The Protocols likewise reflect the Trump administration's rejection of the fundamental humanitarian principles that underpin the U.S. asylum system.

In January 2019, shortly after Nielsen's announcement, Defendants began implementing the Protocols at the San Ysidro port of entry between San Diego, California, and Tijuana, Mexico.⁵ Since their initial implementation, the Protocols have been expanded and currently are being implemented at all ports of entry along the U.S.-Mexico border.⁶

The Protocols rely on the INA's detention scheme for their implementation. Under the INA, individuals subjected to MPP are "detained." 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), (C); 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(d).⁷ Thus, from the time individuals are

⁴ See Deborah E. Anker & Michael H. Posner, The Forty Year Crisis: A Legislative History of the Refugee Act of 1980, 19 San Diego L. Rev. 9, 11 (1981)); see also Orantes-Hernandez v. Smith, 541 F. Supp. 351, 375 (C.D. Cal. 1982) (acknowledging the emphasis that Congress placed on the "uniform, nondiscriminatory treatment of refugees").

⁵ Declaration of Hannah R. Coleman ("Coleman Decl."), Ex. I (ICE MPP Implementation Memorandum).

⁶ Coleman Decl. (Ex. T) (Press Release on Expansion of MPP)

Defendants also consider individuals in MPP to be "detained" for the duration of their placement in MPP. Senior Official Performing the Duties of the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security Ken Cuccinelli has stated that individuals in MPP "are essentially on what we call a 'detained docket'—it means they are not going to be released until their case is heard. And so they're waiting in Mexico" Interview with Acting Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security Ken Cuccinelli, "Securing the Southern Border," FOX News at 3:00–3:30 (Nov. 24, 2019), available at https://bit.ly/2TF3fPT.

initially processed under the Protocols until they are returned to Mexico, they are detained by DHS and, therefore, are under DHS's physical custody and control. When they are returned to Mexico, DHS keeps them in statutory detention, retaining custody and control over them. See 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(A), (C); 8 C.F.R. § 235.3(d).

Each time individuals present themselves at a port of entry, they are briefly "paroled into the United States by CBP for purposes of their hearing" under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(d)(5)(A). As a "condition" of their parole, they "remain detained in Department of Homeland Security (DHS) custody" for the period that they are in the United States for their hearing. During that period, "DHS is ultimately responsible for maintaining custody of the [noncitizen]," and individuals are functionally treated the same as those detained in the United States. At the conclusion of their hearing—except in cases where there is a decision on the merits or the case is terminated—the individual is transported by DHS back to the port of entry and "returned to the custody from which he was paroled" in Mexico.¹³

Through a series of independent but related memoranda, statements of guiding principles, and other announcements that collectively comprise the Protocols, Defendants are authorized to exercise pervasive control over individuals from the moment Defendants discretionarily decide to impose the Protocols upon them until they are ordered deported or granted relief. These policies include the Return Policy, the Deprivation of Counsel Policy, the Presentation Requirement, and the Hearing Suspension Directive.

A. The Return Policy

The Protocols' Return Policy forces certain asylum-seeking individuals and families from non-contiguous foreign countries who present themselves at or near the southern U.S. border to return to Mexico for the duration of their immigration proceedings. The Return Policy provides that individuals subject to the Protocols "receive a specific immigration court hearing date and time" and must wait in Mexico until then. On the date of their scheduled immigration court hearing, individuals must present themselves at a designated port of entry hours before their hearing time so that DHS may transport them to immigration court. See, e.g., Hannah Doe Decl. ¶ 15.

In early February 2019, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) issued a policy memorandum ("the ICE Policy Memorandum") providing "operational guidance" on how the Return Policy would be implemented and the manner in which decisions to return individuals to Mexico would be made. It provides, specifically, that "[p]rocessing determinations . . . will be made by U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP), in CBP's enforcement discretion." ¹⁶

B. The Deprivation of Counsel Policy

A memorandum issued by ICE Enforcement and Removal Operations (ERO) ("the ERO Memorandum") on February 12, 2019, describes the Protocols' mechanism for providing individuals with access to counsel. That policy (the "Deprivation of Counsel Policy") is intended to deny access to counsel, and it successfully does so: 93 percent of individuals subjected to the Protocols are not represented by counsel. The ERO Memorandum provides that, to "facilitate" access to legal representation for individuals subjected to the Protocols, "ERO will depart from the [port of entry] with the alien at a time sufficient to ensure arrival at the immigration court not later than one hour before his or her scheduled hearing time in order to afford the alien the opportunity to meet in-person with his or her legal representative. In other words, through the ERO Memorandum, individuals subjected to the Protocols are supposed to be provided a minimum of one hour to consult with their legal representatives before appearing in court.

For individuals who do not have legal representation, the Protocols do not provide any period of time to meet with legal service providers before their scheduled hearings. Compl. ¶¶ 75-76; Declaration of Luis Gonzalez ("Gonzalez Decl.") ¶¶ 23-24; Declaration of Margaret Cargioli ("Cargioli Decl.") ¶ 34; Declaration of Kennji

By contrast, in the fiscal year prior to the implementation of MPP, over 90% of individuals whose asylum cases were decided by the San Diego Immigration Court were represented. Declaration of Amber N. Qureshi ("Qureshi Decl.") ¶¶ 3-7.

¹⁹ Coleman Decl., Ex. J (ICE ERO MPP Guidance) at 3.

Kizuka ("Kizuka Decl.") ¶¶ 20-22. The Protocols also do not guarantee any opportunity to contact or otherwise seek out counsel. Compl. ¶¶ 75-76. For unrepresented individuals, the Protocols provide only a tear sheet containing information about the MPP process and a list of free or low-cost legal service providers. Id. ¶ 75; Coleman Decl., Ex. S (MPP "Tear Sheet"); Bochenek Decl. ¶ 23. According to DHS, the tear sheets are available only in English, Spanish and Portuguese.²⁰

Through the Deprivation of Counsel Policy, Defendants have achieved a seven percent representation rate for individuals who have been returned to Mexico pursuant to the Protocols. That one-hour period, even if it were afforded to the seven percent of individuals in MPP who are represented, fails to provide any meaningful opportunity to access counsel. Gonzalez Decl. ¶¶ 40-44; Cargioli Decl. ¶¶ 27-32.

C. The Presentation Requirement

The Presentation Requirement directs individuals to present themselves at a designated port of entry to gain access to the U.S. asylum system, to attend their asylum hearings, and to maintain their tenuous status in Mexico.

Defendants have implemented the Presentation Requirement through the ERO Memorandum. The ERO Memorandum sets forth certain procedures for notifying individuals subjected to the Protocols of their next hearing, and the manner in which they will be transported to and from that hearing. The ERO Memorandum explains that, "[o]n the day of [their] hearing, an [individual subjected to the Protocols] will arrive at the [port of entry] at the time designated—generally, a time sufficient to allow for CBP processing, prehearing consultation with counsel (if applicable), and timely appearance at hearings."²¹ Individuals subject to the Protocols are not provided with any means to, options for, or information about how to travel to the port of entry at which they are required to appear. Bochenek Decl. ¶¶ 16-18, 34; see, e.g., Feliza Doe Decl. ¶¶ 11, 16; Anthony Doe Decl. ¶ 5-6; Daniel Doe Decl. ¶ 7.

In other words, the Presentation Requirement controls all aspects of how, when, and where individuals must present themselves at a port of entry for their hearings, and individuals face significant penalties—including an in absentia order of removal—if they violate or fail to comply with the Requirement. Bochenek Decl. ¶¶ 16-23. The Requirement functionally traps individuals in dangerous zones and transit corridors around the port of entry, and individuals risk losing their temporary visas and any hope of access to legal assistance if they relocate. Declaration of Daniel Berlin ("Berlin Decl.") ¶¶ 15-28.

D. The Hearing Suspension Directive

Since late March 2020, Defendants have postponed MPP hearings six times, leaving Plaintiffs and thousands of others waiting indefinitely for their day in court. The first five times that Defendants postponed MPP hearings, they provided a specific date for the resumption of hearings. Compl. ¶ 89 & n.21. They also declared that "[n]either the MPP program nor any hearings will be canceled."²² But on July 17, 2020, in the sixth postponement of MPP hearings, Defendants announced the "Hearing Suspension Directive" and provided no date for the resumption of hearings.²³ Defendants instead announced that MPP hearings would resume only after certain "threshold criteria" have been met:

(a) "When California, Arizona, and Texas progress to Stage 3 of their reopening plans";

²² Coleman Decl., Ex. L (March 23, 2020 Joint DHS/ EOIR MPP Hearing Rescheduling Press Release).

²³ Coleman Decl., Ex. M (July 17, 2020 Joint DHS/ DOJ Announcement of Plan to Restart MPP Hearings) ("The U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) remain committed to resuming removal hearings for aliens subject to the Migrant Protection Protocols (MPP) as expeditiously as possible.").

- (b) "When [the Department of State] and [Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)] lower their global health advisories to Level 2 and/or a comparable change in health advisories, regarding Mexico in particular"; and
- (c) "When [the Government of Mexico's] 'stoplight' system categorizes all Mexican border states (i.e. Tamaulipas, Nuevo Leon, Coahuila, Chihuahua, Sonora, and Baja California) as 'yellow.'"²⁴

Defendants have not stated whether additional requirements, beyond the above criteria, would or could be imposed before hearings resume.²⁵ The "threshold criteria" set forth in the Hearing Suspension Directive "are highly unlikely to be met for at least the next six to nine months." Declaration of Arthur L. Reingold ("Reingold Decl.") ¶ 16.

First, it is highly unlikely that California, Arizona, and Texas will progress to—or remain in—Stage 3 of their reopening plans in the near future. As of October 20, 2020, less than half the counties in California were classified as Tier 3 or Tier 4, and none of the six counties closest to the southern border had progressed to Tier 3 or Tier 4. Reingold Decl. ¶ 18. Given the projected surge in COVID-19 cases over the next few months, it is "highly unlikely that all 58 counties in California will move to Tier 3 . . . in the foreseeable future." Id. Texas and Arizona have both experienced drastic increases in COVID-19 cases and hospitalizations in recent weeks. Id. ¶¶ 19-21. Although Texas currently appears to be in Phase 3 of its reopening phases, "the surge of infection and hospitalization rates is likely to result in regression from Phase III to Phase II." Id. ¶ 19. Similarly, in Arizona, "the rising infection rates and the potential of a catastrophic winter is likely to have an impact on Arizona's phases of reopening."

The Hearing Suspension Directive also contains a list of "safeguards" for DHS employees and noncitizens that will apply when hearings resume. These safeguards include further postponements and rescheduling of individual hearings if "a [DHS] facility's capacity is reached." Id.

Id. ¶ 21.

Second, "Mexico is nowhere near meeting [the criterion 2] standard." Id. ¶ 23. The CDC's health advisory for Mexico is currently at Level 3 "High Risk," which is the highest possible level. Id. ¶ 22. For the CDC to lower its advisory to Level 2, Mexico must have under 500 new COVID-19 cases per day. Id. The World Health Organization reported that Mexico had over 5,700 new COVID-19 cases on October 22, 2020 alone. Id.

Finally, as of October 2020, "[b]ased on projections of COVID-19 cases and death rates in the United States and Mexico, it is highly unlikely that the six Mexican border states—referenced in criterion 3—will uniformly reach yellow anytime in the foreseeable future." Id. ¶ 27. As of October 12, three of the Mexican border states were classified by the Mexican Government as "orange," and three were classified as "yellow." Id. ¶ 26. Given the projected surge in COVID-19 cases in the coming months, this criterion will not be met anytime soon.

Thus, through the Hearing Suspension Directive, Defendants have effectively postponed MPP hearings indefinitely. Yet, even though Plaintiffs' immigration court proceedings are no longer "pending," Defendants have maintained their Return Policy, leaving Individual Plaintiffs stranded in Mexico with no end in sight and no access to legal assistance or representation. Bochenek Decl. ¶ 28-36 (describing impediments to legal assistance or representation); e.g., Decl. Daniel Doe ¶¶ 19-20 (describing impact of suspended hearings); Decl. Nicholas Doe ¶ 12 (same); Decl. Jessica Doe ¶ 14 (same). Defendants have thereby deprived Individual Plaintiffs of a meaningful right to apply for asylum. By obstructing access to counsel, Defendants have also undermined Organizational Plaintiffs' missions and statutorily protected role of providing pro bono representation to asylum seekers.

LEGAL STANDARD

Plaintiffs seeking a preliminary injunction generally must show that: (1) they are likely to succeed on the merits; (2) they are likely to suffer irreparable harm absent preliminary relief; (3) the balance of equities tips in their favor; and (4) an injunction is in the public interest. Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008). In the Ninth Circuit, "serious questions going to the merits' and a hardship balance that tips sharply toward the plaintiff can support issuance of an injunction, assuming the other two elements of the Winter test are also met." Aliance for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1131–32 (9th Cir. 2011). For the reasons discussed below, Plaintiffs meet all these requirements.

ARGUMENT

I. INDIVIDUAL AND ORGANIZATIONAL PLAINTIFFS ARE LIKELY TO SUFFER IRREPARABLE HARM IN THE ABSENCE OF IMMEDIATE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF.

Individual Plaintiffs will likely suffer irreparable harm if Defendants are not prohibited from implementing the Return Policy while the Hearing Suspension Directive is in effect, and from obstructing Individual Plaintiffs' access to legal services.

A. Harm to Individual Plaintiffs

Individual Plaintiffs are "non-Mexicans returned to Mexico under the MPP" who "risk substantial harm, even death, while they await adjudication of their applications for asylum" and thus have a "significant likelihood" of suffering irreparable harm. Innovation Law Lab v. Wolf, 951 F.3d 1073, 1093 (9th Cir. 2020), judgment stayed, 140 S. Ct. 1564, cert. granted, — S. Ct. — (2020). In Mexico, Individual Plaintiffs and others similarly situated are trapped in dangerous zones and transit corridors in Mexico, where they have endured physical attacks and grave threats at the hands of Mexican police and organized criminal groups, have been denied their basic human needs, and have been deprived of access to legal assistance. The State Department has reported for three consecutive years that the dangers that forced Central American migrants to flee their homes also exist in Mexico, as Central American gangs have "spread farther into the country and threatened migrants who had fled the same gangs in their home countries."²⁶ Tijuana is among the deadliest cities in the world.²⁷ In 2018, Tijuana was described as "the most violent city in the world," and Baja California, where Tijuana is located, had the most reported murders of any state in Mexico.²⁸ Indeed, President Trump has acknowledged that Mexico is not a safe place for migrants, tweeting on January 31, 2019: "Very sadly, Murder cases in Mexico in 2018 rose 33% from 2017, to 33,341."²⁹

Individual Plaintiffs have experienced these dangers, all of which constitute irreparable harm, firsthand.

- Plaintiff Hannah Doe has been the victim of assault and attempted rape.

- After bullets penetrated the walls of the shelter where Plaintiff Nicholas Doe lived in Tijuana, he moved south to Rosarito, where he has been robbed and continues to be threatened with physical violence. Nicholas Doe Decl. ¶¶ 13-14.
- Plaintiff Feliza Doe was threatened and chased by a taxi driver, and she fears for the safety of her three young daughters at a shelter in Mexicali where a man has tried to rape another child. Feliza Doe Decl. ¶¶ 39-40.
- Plaintiff Jaqueline Doe has been robbed, threatened with robbery and physical violence, verbally abused, and physically assaulted because of her gender identity. Declaration of Jaqueline Doe ("Jaqueline Doe Decl.") ¶¶ 49-54.
- Individual Plaintiffs have also faced unwarranted arrests, extortion and threats from the police in Mexico. Daniel Doe Decl. ¶ 22 (Mexican police stopped and extorted him, threatening to hand him over to Mexican immigration authorities if he did not pay them); Nicholas Doe Decl. ¶ 16 (Mexican police arrested him despite his humanitarian visa and threatened to hold him until after his immigration hearing if he did not pay them).

Much of the violence Individual Plaintiffs have experienced can be attributed to Defendants' Return Policy, which forces non-Mexican asylum seekers to await their hearings in Mexico.³⁰ For example, Daniel Doe has been targeted for mugging because the assailants could tell that he "was not from their country." Daniel Doe

Individual Plaintiffs are largely unable to relocate from border towns because they must arrive at the port of entry on the day of their hearing as early as 3 am; living far from the border is not a viable option given the dangers of traveling in the dark and the pervasive violence targeted towards migrants. See Daniel Doe Decl. ¶¶ 14, 28; Nicholas Doe Decl. ¶¶ 10-11; Feliza Doe Decl. ¶ 47. Moreover, Individual Plaintiffs generally do not have sufficient financial resources to relocate or to travel back and forth to the port of entry. Daniel Doe Decl. ¶ 28; Feliza Doe Decl. ¶¶ 36-39; Nicholas Doe Decl. ¶ 14.

Decl. ¶ 23. The shelter where Feliza Doe lives with her children has instructed them not to go out at night because of the number of targeted attacks against migrants. Decl. of Feliza Doe ¶¶ 39-40. Apart from targeted physical violence, Individual Plaintiffs and their families must engage in a daily struggle for survival while trapped in Mexico and have found it difficult to meet their most basic needs. See, e.g., Daniel Doe Decl. ¶¶ 7, 9-11, 21, 29, 31 (describing inability to cover basic expenses, including inability to pay for a medical exam to treat his daughter's chronic condition); Benjamin Doe Decl. ¶¶ 15-18, 20-21 (describing unfit living conditions, including two months without reliable running water); Feliza Doe Decl. ¶¶ 11-13, 36-38 (describing inability to pay for sufficient food, water, clothing, and medicine for her young daughters); Jaqueline Doe Decl. ¶¶ 7-9, 19, 20, 22, 25, 26, 33, 46, 55, 57 (describing sleeping on the street for days at a time and ongoing inability to consistently afford medicine, food, water, electricity, and housing). Given their precarious legal status in Mexico and the dangers that surround them, Individual Plaintiffs also have limited options to work and are vulnerable to exploitation by their employers. See, e.g., Benjamin Doe Decl. ¶ 17 (works a cleaning job without authorization); Jessica Doe Decl. ¶ 11 (had to stop working in order to protect her children after a cartel threatened to kidnap her son); Anthony Doe Decl. ¶¶ 7-8, 10 (unable to find steady work because employers refuse to accept his documents as work authorization).³¹

B. Harm to Organizational Plaintiffs

Defendants' Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy also cause substantial harm to Organizational Plaintiffs Immigrant Defenders Law Center ("ImmDef") and Jewish Family Service of San Diego ("Jewish Family Service"). The

See, e.g., Feliza Doe Decl. ¶ 21 (employer at cleaning job stopped paying her after two weeks); Nicholas Doe Decl. ¶ 15 (unable to find steady work because he does not have authorization and Mexican police confiscated the produce he tried to sell); Daniel Doe Decl. ¶ 11-12 (must leave his teenage daughter home alone six days a week in order to work); Jaqueline Doe Decl. ¶ 25 (does not earn enough money to support herself); Hannah Doe Decl. ¶ 27 (unable to find work since August 2020, when she was terminated due to COVID-19 pandemic).

policies have required ImmDef and Jewish Family Service to divert significant resources from other programs to assist individuals subject to the Protocols and have hindered their ability to deliver meaningful pro bono legal assistance.³²

Plaintiff Jewish Family Service has been forced to divert significant resources from existing programs in the San Diego area to the detriment of its mission and its overall programming. Gonzalez Decl. ¶¶ 12-14, 17-19. To address the needs of Individual Plaintiffs, Jewish Family Service was forced to overhaul its programming and reallocate resources to provide cross-border legal services for individuals trapped in Mexico. Id. It repurposed significant portions of its staff members' time and added three full-time-equivalent employees. Id. ¶ 15. It also created a hotline through which staff provide legal consultations, screenings, and an overview of MPP proceedings. Id. ¶¶ 18-22. The consultations tend to last at least one hour, and the hotline has required an adjustment of staffing to fully manage the number of calls. Id. ¶¶ 19-20. As of September 30, 2020, Jewish Family Service had provided over 573 legal consultations through the hotline. Id. ¶ 17. Due to dangerous conditions in Mexico, Jewish Family Service also had to purchase additional insurance to protect itself and its staff. Id. ¶ 27.

Plaintiff ImmDef likewise has had to aggressively reallocate resources to provide a new form of representation as a result of MPP. Because individuals subject to MPP must appear in the San Diego immigration court, ImmDef had to open an office in San Diego, which necessitated shifting significant funding and staffing resources and setting aside previously-planned work in other existing programs in and around Los Angeles, where ImmDef is based. Declaration of Lindsay Toczlowski ("Toczlowski Decl.") ¶¶ 13-23. ImmDef's staff now undertakes cross-border representation, which its attorneys had not previously handled. Id. ¶¶ 13-18. Because of the complex and exhausting nature of representing clients in Mexico, ImmDef's San Diego office faces high turnover, requiring the organization to expend additional resources to recruit, interview, and train new staff. Id. ¶ 24.

Defendants' Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy significantly impact Organizational Plaintiffs' abilities to conduct consultations, meet with clients, and prepare cases, which the pandemic has only exacerbated. Toczlowski Decl. ¶ 26; Cargioli Decl. ¶¶ 27-30, 36-42; Gonzalez Decl. ¶ 32. Because travel to Mexico largely has been suspended, communication with clients must happen over the phone or WhatsApp, which is not as effective as in-person communication. Cargioli Decl. ¶ 24; Gonzalez Decl. ¶ 33. Calls take longer because of bad reception, poor Internet quality, and other technological difficulties. Cargioli Decl. ¶ 22; Gonzalez Decl. ¶ 33. Because clients often do not have access to spaces where they can speak confidentially, they are less able to discuss the traumatizing facts of their cases. Cargioli Decl. ¶¶ 22, 31; Gonzalez Decl. ¶¶ 33, 38. Challenges with Internet and mobile access in Mexico also complicate the sharing of documents, compromise the quality of the documents transmitted, and raise confidentiality concerns. Gonzalez Decl. ¶ 34. Several of Jewish Family Service's clients have been forced to change their phone numbers due to threats of violence, making communication even more difficult and raising concerns about loss of data. Id. \P 35.

II. PLAINTIFFS ARE LIKELY TO SUCCEED ON THE MERITS OF THEIR APA CLAIMS

A. Defendants' continued implementation of the Return Policy in the absence of any pending MPP proceedings violates the INA and is not in accordance with law.

This Court should set aside Defendants' decision to continue to implement the Return Policy despite the Hearing Suspension Directive because that decision is "not in accordance with law." 5 U.S.C. § 706(2)(A); see East Bay Sanctuary Covenant v. Trump, 950 F.3d 1242, 1271 (9th Cir. 2020). In implementing the Protocols, Defendants rely on 8 U.S.C. § 235(b)(2)(C).³³ But as the Ninth Circuit already has held, that provision limits the return to "a foreign territory contiguous to the United States" of certain noncitizens who are "arriving on land" from that territory only "pending a proceeding under [8 U.S.C. § 1229a]." Innovation Law Lab, 951 F.3d at 1083 (quoting 8 U.S.C. § 1225(b)(2)(C) (emphasis added)); see also 8 C.F.R. §235.3(d) (permitting return of certain noncitizens to contiguous territory only "while awaiting a removal hearing"). Because MPP hearings have been indefinitely suspended, the proceedings for individuals who have been returned to Mexico no longer are "pending" within the meaning of § 1225(b)(2)(C) and, therefore, the Individual Plaintiffs should not be subjected to the Return Policy. Unlike Defendants' earlier postponements of hearings for individuals in MPP—which merely deferred hearings to a specified date (see supra Section II(D))—the Hearing Suspension Directive suspends hearings indefinitely and "does not make sufficiently certain what is otherwise an unacceptably uncertain end-date." United States v. Olsen, — F. Supp. 3d —, 2020 WL 5542862, at *4 (C.D. Cal. Sept. 2, 2020) (so describing similar criteria used to determine COVID-19 exposure risks). Defendants' decision to continue implementing the Protocols in the absence of any "pending" proceedings violates the plain text of the INA, exceeds Defendants' authority, and is blatantly unlawful.

B. As applied, the Protocols violate the Refugee Act.

"It is undisputed that all [noncitizens] possess [the right to apply for asylum] under the [Refugee] Act." Orantes-Hernandez v. Thornburg, 919 F.2d 549, 553 (9th Cir. 1990).³⁴ That substantive right includes not only the right to apply for asylum, but also the right to "substantiate [a] claim for asylum," Augustin v. Sava, 735 F.2d 32, 36 (2nd Cir. 1984) (citations omitted); the right to counsel at no expense to the government, see 8 U.S.C. § 1158(d)(4) (providing notice of the right to counsel for an asylum application); and the right to access information to support an application, see 8 U.S.C. § 1158(b)(1)(B) (placing the burden on the applicant to present evidence to establish eligibility). The independent statutory right to asylum counsel under 8 U.S.C. § 1158(d)(4) serves several purposes, including helping the individual seeking asylum present evidence to satisfy the burden of proving their asylum claim. As DHS has recognized, this right to counsel attaches even before the asylum application is filed.³⁵ Although a grant of asylum is discretionary, the right to seek such relief is not.

³⁴ See also Jean v. Nelson, 711 F.2d 1455, 1507 (11th Cir. 1983), affirmed as modified, 472 U.S. 846 (1985) (Refugee Act confers protected right to apply for asylum); Haitian Refugee Ctr. v. Smith, 676 F.2d 1023, 1038–39 (5th Cir. 1982) (same).

The substantive right to apply for asylum further includes the right to uniform treatment by the government. By its text, the INA requires the government to provide a uniform method to apply for asylum under 8 U.S.C. § 1158(a)(1).³⁶ Through the Refugee Act, Congress also intended to provide for uniform treatment of those asylum applications. See Orantes-Hernandez, 541 F. Supp. at 375 (acknowledging Congress's focus on the "uniform, nondiscriminatory treatment of refugees" when it passed the Refugee Act). Thus, the geographic location where an individual applies for asylum should have no bearing under federal law on the merits of his or her application.

Plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of their claim that DHS, by implementing the Return Policy and the Deprivation of Counsel Policy, has obstructed Individual Plaintiffs' substantive right to apply for asylum by effectively nullifying all of the protections that the INA and the Refugee Act afford. First, the Return Policy obstructs Individual Plaintiffs' ability to seek legal services for the purpose of preparing their applications. See Cargioli Decl. ¶ 19-32; Gonzalez Decl. ¶ 32-39; Kizuka Decl. ¶¶ 22; 26; Declaration of Adam Isacson ("Isacson Decl.") ¶¶ 28-29; Berlin Decl. ¶¶ 26-27; Declaration of Steve Schulman ("Schulman Decl.") ¶¶ 8-15; Bochenek Decl. ¶¶ 28-36. While they are trapped in Mexico, Individual Plaintiffs cannot communicate meaningfully with legal service providers who work and practice in the United States, and therefore cannot meaningfully prepare their asylum applications. See Cargioli Decl. ¶¶ 21-26; Gonzalez Decl. ¶¶ 20, 33-39. Without meaningful access to legal assistance, Individual Plaintiffs also cannot fully understand and exercise their statutory right to access information to support an application. See 8 U.S.C. § 1158(b)(1)(B). Such information is necessary to allow individuals seeking asylum to fully "substantiate their claim[s]." Augustin, 735 F.2d at 36.

Second, the Return Policy obstructs access to other components of the asylum system. For instance, because they are trapped in Mexico, Individual Plaintiffs cannot access local libraries, legal materials, or other reference materials to assist them as they prepare for and gather evidence to support their cases. And for those who seek to reside in California, because they are trapped in Mexico, they cannot access any of the California-funded nonprofits or community-based organizations that offer social services—including food, housing, and other essential social and humanitarian services—to individuals seeking asylum in the San Diego and Los Angeles immigration courts. See, e.g., Daniel Doe Decl. ¶ 33.

Third, the Return Policy violates the Refugee Act's requirement of uniform treatment of asylum claims. See Orantes-Hernandez, 541 F. Supp. at 375. By design, the Return Policy arbitrarily treats asylum applicants at the southern border differently from those who apply for asylum elsewhere. In other words, through the Return Policy, DHS has created arbitrary and systematic restrictions that apply only to asylum seekers at the U.S.-Mexican border. Indeed, the Return Policy appears to be designed to coerce individuals to abandon their asylum claims altogether. Cf. Orantes-Hernandez, 919 F.2d at 557 (pattern of coercion and interference with right to apply for asylum violates the INA). Thus, by its design, the Return Policy effectively denies individuals—upwards of 60,000 to date—the right to apply for asylum in the United States.³⁷

C. As applied, the Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy systemically obstruct the INA's right-to-counsel provisions.

Organizational Plaintiffs are likely to succeed in their claim that the Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy violate 8 U.S.C. §§ 1158, 1229a(b)(4), and 1362 and are arbitrary and capricious in violation of the APA. These policies systemically obstruct the INA's right to counsel and prevent Organizational Plaintiffs from meaningfully fulfilling their statutorily protected function of providing pro bono legal services to individuals seeking asylum or other humanitarian relief. The policies are also arbitrary and capricious because Defendants failed to consider the ways in which they would obstruct access to counsel, including the obstacles that they would create to Organizational Plaintiffs' ability to meaningfully communicate with and represent clients and potential clients.

1. The Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy violate the statutory right to counsel.

The INA codifies a right to counsel that is rooted in the Due Process Clause. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1158(d)(4), 1229a(b)(4)(A), 1362; see also Biwot v. Gonzales, 403 F.3d 1094, 1098 (9th Cir. 2005); Torres v. U.S. Dep't of Homeland Sec., 411 F. Supp. 3d 1036, 1061 (C.D. Cal. 2019). This statutory right mandates that asylum seekers have meaningful access to counsel, including the ability to seek legal representation at no cost to the government, to consult with legal service providers, and to safely and confidentially communicate with retained counsel. See, e.g., Compl. ¶¶ 41-47.

By trapping asylum seekers in Mexico—across an international border from immigration attorneys and other legal resources intended to assist them—the Return Policy violates the INA's clear mandate that individuals fleeing persecution have access to legal counsel. Individuals subject to the Return Policy are unable to access legal representation throughout the asylum process, including for the purposes of seeking humanitarian parole, participating in non-refoulement interviews, completing affirmative applications such as for victims of human trafficking, and pursuing other avenues for relief from removal. See supra section II(B) (on asylum system).

Even for the seven percent of individuals subject to MPP who have secured legal representation, the Return Policy obstructs their ability to meaningfully access their representatives by preventing them from safely meeting with those representatives, confidentially communicating with them, and meeting the basic needs of themselves and their families. See, e.g., Daniel Doe Decl. ¶ 29 (explaining that he cannot always afford the phone minutes or Internet credits required to speak with his attorney); Nicholas Doe Decl. ¶ 9 (describing losing cell phone connection during calls with his attorney); Feliza Doe Decl. ¶¶ 30-33 (explaining that poor cell phone connection means that calls with her attorney often drop and she must repeat traumatic details of her story, and that the lack of private space to speak with her attorney hinders her ability to speak freely); Jessica Doe Decl. ¶ 15 (stating that she does not want to discuss sensitive topics in front of her children); see also supra Section I(A) (addressing Individual Plaintiffs' inability to meet basic needs). The Deprivation of Counsel Policy further obstructs access to counsel by limiting legal consultations before a hearing to a single hour for represented individuals only, and by failing to provide confidential meeting space or the legal resources necessary during that time. The Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy therefore make meaningful access to counsel functionally impossible and are not in accordance with law.

2. The Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy obstruct Organizational Plaintiffs' statutorily protected role of providing legal services to asylum seekers.

By systemically violating the INA's right-to-counsel provisions, the Return Policy and the Deprivation of Counsel Policy are also not in accordance with law because they interfere with the Organizational Plaintiffs' statutorily contemplated role of delivering meaningful pro bono legal assistance to asylum seekers. Under the INA, ImmDef and Jewish Family Service fulfill a statutorily protected purpose of "ensur[ing] that pro bono legal services of the type that [they] provide are available to asylum seekers." See East Bay Sanctuary Covenant v. Trump, 932 F.3d 742, 768 (9th Cir. 2018) (citing 8 U.S.C. § 1158(d)(4)(A)–(B)). Indeed, the Ninth Circuit has found that the asylum statutes "directly rely on institutions like [ImmDef and Jewish Family Service] to aid immigrants." Id. at 769.

ImmDef and Jewish Family Service cannot meaningfully fulfill their statutorily protected roles in the asylum system for Individual Plaintiffs because the Return Policy and the Deprivation of Counsel Policy systemically obstruct the INA's right to counsel. Organizational Plaintiffs are unable to make contact with potential clients due to the obstacles posed by the Return Policy and the restrictions of the Deprivation of Counsel Policy. See, e.g., Cargioli Decl. ¶¶ 19, 22-25; Gonzalez Decl. ¶¶ 23-24, 32-39, 41-42, 45.

Even for Individual Plaintiffs who make contact with ImmDef and Jewish Family Service, the Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy make meaningful communication exceedingly difficult. Organizational Plaintiffs cannot meet in person with their clients, complicating the trust-building that is necessary to develop an asylum claim. See Gonzalez Decl. ¶ 26; Cargioli Decl. ¶¶ 17,19. Their clients often cannot find confidential places to speak over the phone.³⁸ Gonzalez Decl.

³⁸ See also Benjamin Doe Decl. ¶ 25; Daniel Doe Decl. ¶ 30.

¶ 33; Cargioli Decl. ¶ 24. And communication from Mexico is often financially and technologically challenging.³⁹ Id. Moreover, the one-hour period of in-person access that represented individuals are provided under the Deprivation of Counsel Policy, now effectively suspended by the Hearing Suspension Directive, not only is grossly insufficient, Gonzalez Decl. ¶ 20, Cargioli Decl. ¶¶ 27-29, but also does not extend to the 93 percent of individuals returned to Mexico who remain unrepresented. The Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy thus systematically obstruct ImmDef and Jewish Family Service's statutorily protected role of providing pro bono legal services for asylum-seeking individuals and are not in accordance with law.

3. The Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy are arbitrary and capricious because Defendants failed to consider their impact on the right to access counsel and the role of probono legal service providers.

The Return Policy and Deprivation of Counsel Policy are also arbitrary and capricious because in their implementation and expansion, Defendants failed to consider how they would impact the INA's right to counsel provisions and the ability of Organizational Plaintiffs to fulfill their statutorily contemplated roles in the asylum system, including by providing legal assistance to Individual Plaintiffs. See Compl ¶¶ 79-83 (describing the 2019 "Law Lab v. Wolf Administrative Record" and the absence of evidence of such consideration). Defendants plainly failed to consider the manner in which the policies would obstruct individuals subject to the Protocols from identifying, locating, communicating with, retaining, or consulting with legal representatives, including those at ImmDef and Jewish Family Service. Moreover, Defendants failed to consider the fact that many legal service providers are unable to represent individuals who must remain in Mexico to await their immigration court hearings. Schulman Decl. ¶ 8 ("The MPP has, in any event, significantly curtailed our ability to provide pro bono representation to asylum-seekers."); Berlin Decl. ¶ 26 ("Asylum seekers in the MPP program encounter nearly insurmountable barriers in accessing counsel."); Kizuka Decl. ¶ 18 ("In my experience, for asylum seekers forced to remain in Mexico under MPP, merely attempting to meet with an attorney in Mexico can be dangerous.").

III. THE BALANCE OF HARDSHIPS AND PUBLIC INTEREST FACTORS TIP SHARPLY IN FAVOR OF PLAINTIFFS.

The balance of equities tips sharply in Plaintiffs' favor, and an injunction is in the public interest because of the widespread harm the Protocols will cause if allowed to remain in effect. When the federal government is a party, the balance of the equities and public interest factors merge. Drakes Bay Oyster Co. v. Jewell, 747 F.3d 1073, 1092 (9th Cir. 2014) (citing Nken v. Holder, 556 U.S. 418, 435 (2009)).

As the Ninth Circuit has recognized, individuals who are forced to remain in Mexico "risk substantial harm, even death, while they await adjudication of their applications for asylum." Innovation Law Lab, 951 F.3d at 1093. Individual Plaintiffs are at grave risk of these same harms. See Kizuka Decl. ¶¶ 9-17; Isacson Decl. ¶¶ 2-27; Berlin Decl. ¶¶ 13, 18-22; Bochenek Decl. ¶¶ 5-15. These harms have been exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic. See supra Section I; see also Bochenek Decl. ¶¶ 9, 12-15; Cargioli Decl. ¶¶ 36-42; see also Castillo v. Barr, 449 F. Supp. 3d 915, 923 (C.D. Cal. 2020) (finding that "[t]he balance of the equities tip sharply in favor of the Petitioners" where "Petitioners face[] irreparable harm to their constitutional rights and health" because the government's conditions of detention increased their risk of contracting COVID-19). And the relief that Plaintiffs seek would return immigration law to the status quo that existed for decades before the Protocols were implemented.

Meanwhile, Defendants have no legitimate or lawful reason to force asylum seekers to wait in Mexico indefinitely or to further prevent their access to the asylum system. See Castillo, 449 F.Supp.3d at 923 ("[T]here is no harm to the Government when a court prevents the Government from engaging in unlawful practices"). The Protocols are unlawful and the Government has no legitimate interest in violating the Constitution, see United States v. U.S. Coin & Currency, 401 U.S. 715, 726 (1971) (Brennan, J., concurring), or federal law, Valle del Sol Inc. v. Whiting, 732 F.3d 1006, 1029 (9th Cir. 2013).⁴⁰

IV. CLASSWIDE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF IS NECESSARY

This Court has broad discretion to craft the scope of the injunction, "for breadth and flexibility are inherent in equitable remedies." C.F. v. Capistrano Unified School Dist., 647 F. Supp. 2d 1187, 1191 (C.D. Cal. 2009) (quoting Swann v. Charlotte-Mecklenburg Bd. of Ed., 402 U.S. 1, 15 (1971)) (internal quotation marks omitted). As with any equitable remedy, "the nature of the violation determines the scope of the remedy." Id. Thus, the scope of the injunctive relief must be "dictated by the extent of the violation established, not by the geographical extent of the plaintiff class." Califano v. Yamasaki, 442 U.S. 682, 702 (1979); see also East Bay Sanctuary Covenant v. Barr, 934 F.3d 1026, 1030 (9th Cir. 2019) (describing the "wellestablished rule" that an equitable remedy is only appropriate when it is "tailored to remedy the specific harm alleged" (quoting Lamb-Weston, Inc. v. McCain Foods, Ltd., 941 F.2d 970, 974 (9th Cir. 1991)).

Federal courts may issue a classwide preliminary injunction where it is "necessary to afford the class members the relief to which they are entitled." Doe #1 v. Trump, 957 F.3d 1050, 1069 (9th Cir. 2020) ("'[T]here is no bar against class-wide, and nationwide relief in federal district or circuit court when it is appropriate[.]" (internal citation omitted)); see also City & Cty. of San Francisco v. Trump, 897 F.3d 1225, 1244–45 (9th Cir. 2018) (rejecting blanket restriction on nationwide injunctions and deferring to the "considerable discretion [of the district court] in ordering an appropriate equitable remedy"); Chhoeun v. Marin, 306 F. Supp. 3d 1147, 1164 (C.D. Cal. 2018) (granting classwide injunction when "necessary to forestall harm to putative class members that is likely to transpire before the parties can litigate a motion for class certification").

Here, Plaintiffs seek a classwide injunction addressing the harms caused by Defendants' implementation of the Return Policy, the Deprivation of Counsel Policy, and the Presentation Requirement. In the absence of classwide injunctive relief, Individual Plaintiffs will continue to suffer irreparable harm resulting from dangerous conditions in which they must live in Mexico, their ongoing deprivation of basic needs, and their continued inability to access the legal resources necessary to protect their rights to seek relief from removal. Because of the classwide harm that will result, a classwide injunction is appropriate. See Coleman v. Schwarzenegger, 922 F. Supp. 2d 882, 963 (E.D. Cal. 2009) (policies with "systemwide injury and impact" call for a "systemwide remedy"); see also Hawaii v. Trump, 878 F.3d 662, 701 (9th Cir. 2017), rev'd on other grounds by Trump v. Hawaii, 138 S. Ct. 2392 (2018) (immigration policies demand uniformity).

CONCLUSION

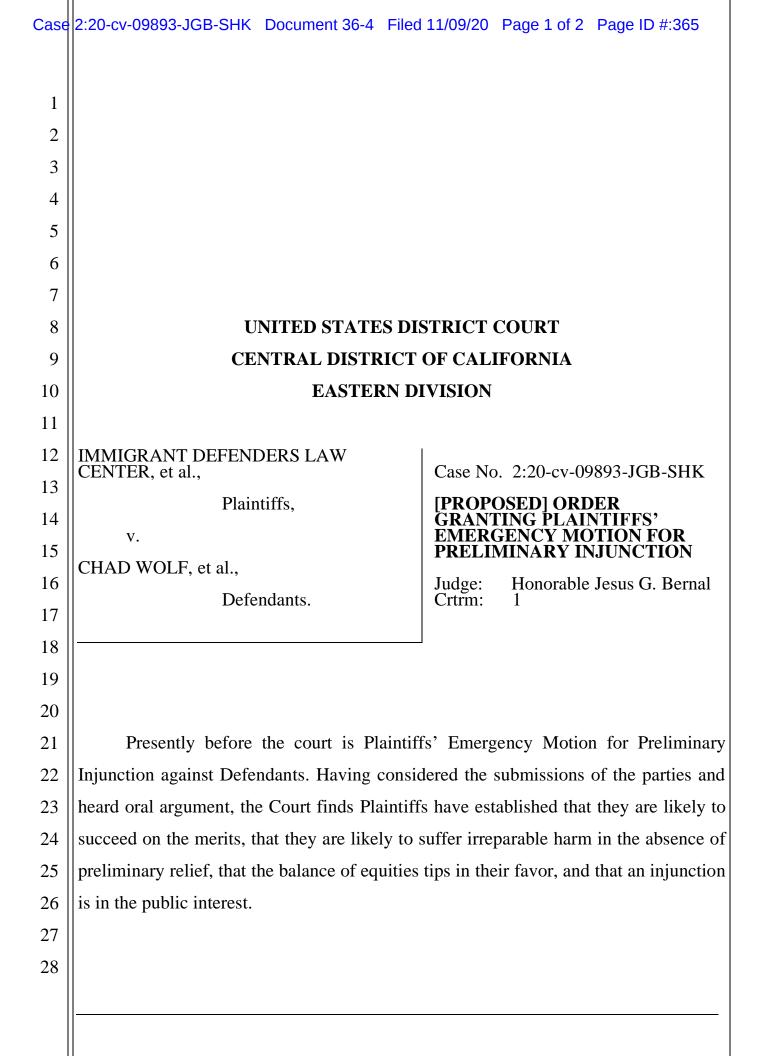

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiffs respectfully request that this Court order immediate preliminary injunctive relief enjoining the Return Policy until hearings can safely resume and Individual Plaintiffs have meaningful access to legal services; allowing the Individual Plaintiffs to return to the United States, with appropriate precautionary public health measures, to pursue their asylum claims; and requiring Defendants to provide meaningful access to legal services for all Individual Plaintiffs.
